AUTO BURNS IN FREIGHT TRAIN

Electric Machine Consigned to Gettysburg Resident Damaged so that it Cannot be Used. Likely Caused by Crossed Wires.

Fire rendered completely useless a remodeled Studebaker electric automobile which arrived here from Washington Friday consigned to Amos Eckert of Springs avenue. The blaze which did the damage occurred during the trip from the Capitol City to Gettysburg, after the machine had been placed in a freight car which was later sealed.

The machine, a two passenger electric, was purchased by Mr. Eckert from Edmund K. Fox, of Washington. It had been remodeled, repainted and improved at an expense of several hundred dollars by Mr. Fox before its shipment to Gettysburg and bore every evidence of being a new machine when it was handed over to the railroad.

When the car was opened at the Western Maryland freight station here the batteries in the rear had dropped out and on all sides there were evidences of a serious fire. All the woodwork about the rear of the automobile was destroyed. The paint on the body was blistered, a tire ruined and acid from the batteries had disfigured other portions of the electric.

At some time after the machine was placed in the freight car wires evidently crossed causing the blaze which did damage that will require a large expenditure to remedy. Mr. Eckert refused to lift the car.

Whether or not the wiring was defective, freeing the railroad from blame is not known. Otherwise it is believed the accident will be a matter for damage adjustment.

McSHERRYSTOWN

McSherrystown—A party of local sportsmen contemplate spending a few days along the Big Conewago, next week.

Henry Reese, who had the thumb of his left hand broken a month ago, is improving slowly.

Examinations are now being held in St. Mary's parochial school.

Mrs. Louis B. Johns, of Midway, who has been seriously ill, is greatly improved.

Supervisor Augustus Klunk has relaid most of the crossings on Main street.

Citizens of Main street are scraping that thoroughfare preparatory to oiling the street, which work will be started next week.

Mrs. Mary A. Bishop is having her two houses on Main street repainted.

The Conewago Game and Fish Protective Association met in the barber shop of Clarence G. Smith, when four new members were admitted to membership. It was reported that on Saturday two members of the State Constabulary made a visit along the local creek to look up illegal fishing. They came across two men fishing with outlines, which is contrary to law, but the fellows got away before the officials could get at them.

TO HELP FARMERS

Federal Appropriation to Aid State Farm Work.

Governor Tener has signed the State's acceptance of the provisions of the Lever law, recently passed by Congress for the aid of agricultural extension work in the States. The apportionment of the funds provided by Congress will be on a basis of rural population and the first year will mean $10,000. As the population grows and the State gives more money, the Federal allotment will grow.

President E. E. Sparks of State College says that the work would be done through farm bureaus, one of which will be established in every county. Several such bureaus are now in operation.

BRITISHERS HERE

Members of British Embassy Pay Visit to the Battlefield.

MANY GUESTS AT COLLEGE DANCE

Pan Hellenic Dance Brings Many Visitors from a Distance. New Dances Feature Annual Social Affair.

Castle walking, one stepping, tangoing, hesitating and horse trotting from half past nine last night until half past two this morning the guests at the annual Pan Hellenic dance opened the social festivities of Commencement week at college in Glatfelter Hall.

The greater portion of the guests were from out of town and a number of alumni and students from other colleges were back for the event which, for a score or more years, has been held the Friday night before commencement week by the six Greek Letter fraternities at the institution. Pretty favors in the shape of programs in gold filigree work were given as reminders of the evening.

The order of dances included many things never seen on a Gettysburg College dance card before. True it is that the affair opened with a two step and closed with a waltz, but in between were scattered an assortment of rags, schottisches, castle walks, hesitations and one steps with now and then a tango. The college orchestra played and the event will go down in the social history of the school as of the general standard of the function in former years.

The patronesses were Mrs. Granville, Mrs. Bickle, Mrs. S. McC. Swope, Mrs. Sheely, Mrs. Duncan, Mrs. Hersh, Mrs. Elmer Smith, Mrs. J. Donald Swope, Mrs. Crouse, Mrs. Huber, Dr. Bickle was the patron.

DIED IN HOUSE OF CORRECTION

Dr. Stonesifer of Littlestown, Dies while Serving Sentence in the Maryland House of Correction. Other Deaths.

Dr. Claude A. Stonesifer, formerly a well-known athlete, who lived in Baltimore, and was known in Littlestown where he visited at different times, died on Saturday at the Maryland House of Correction, where he was serving a term of two years after conviction of assaulting Matilda Scott, colored. Death was due to Bright's disease.

He was sentenced on May 1, 1913, by Judge Dobler, and was taken seriously ill last January. His mother and sister and a trained nurse were at his bedside when he died.

He was refused a new trial by the Supreme Bench and was given the maximum penalty for the offense of which he was convicted. Strong efforts were made to have Dr. Stonesifer pardoned or at least released from prison so he could be treated in an outside hospital. Both were unsuccessful.

The body was buried in St. Benjamin's cemetery, near Westminster, Tuesday, after funeral services in the Reformed church, adjoining the cemetery.

YOUTH ON FARM TRIES SUICIDE

Twelve Year Old Boy on Farm Near Glenville Tries to End his Life by Hanging. Unconscious for Several Hours but will Live.

Wilfred Snyder, eleven years old, was found hanging from a rope looped about his neck in the barn of George Mosebrook, near Glenville, by whom he was employed as helper, having attempted suicide. The boy was found by Mr. Mosebrook. He was unconscious and remained in that condition for some hours but has since recovered consciousness. He is the son of Samuel Snyder, Hanover, a freight engineer on the Western Maryland railway. No motive for the attempt to end his life has been ascertained.

The boy had finished his day's work and was sent to the barn by Mr. Mosebrook to get his coat and feed the dog. When after ten minutes he did not return, Mr. Mosebrook went to look for him. He found him hanging by the rope which was suspended from the joist leading from the stairway entry. The rope was three feet in length and it is supposed that after adjusting the noose about his neck the lad walked down the steps. He had been in lively spirits all day.

After freeing the body by opening the loop Mr. Mosebrook carried the body into the house and summoned Dr. W. D. Danner, who worked until after midnight in an effort to revive him. Mosebrook is tenant on the Henry Stick farm. The boy, whose mother is dead, until two months ago lived with his grandmother, Mrs. J. H. Snyder, Brodbeck, where he attended school.

NO CHARGES PREFERRED

Confession Required to Clear Mystery of Girl's Murder.

Unless some formal confession can be secured, it is the general belief that it will be hard to fix the responsibility for the death of Hazel Myers, of York Springs, found dead in an outhouse near Carlisle two weeks ago. While suspicion points strongly to several persons who may have been implicated, yet there is so far, according to the officers, no tangible evidence that would warrant charges being preferred.

Charles Kramer who, it is said, while in the Carlisle lockup on Monday night, made certain incriminating statements which he later denied, is still in jail but keeps to his story that he knows nothing relative to the occurrence. All efforts to break down his denial have proved fruitless.

Cora Dayton, whom "Bum Donald" in a letter sent to the Carlisle police, claims had something to do with the murder, cannot be located but if she could and a confession secured, it might do much towards clearing up the case.

It was thought for a time that Kramer might have written the letter but efforts have been made to secure samples of his handwriting. Whether from design or not, he has obliterated or blotted all specimens so that they little resemble the letter.

Another fact has entered in the case which seems to change matters somewhat. Several persons are willing to swear that they saw the girl as late as Friday morning. Kramer, according to his own account, was with her late Thursday night. Physicians are, however, loath to venture an opinion as to the length of time the girl lay in the cellar before she was found.

DISMANTLING PLANT

Valuable Property Built Five Years Ago Cost Over $125,000.

The large brick plant, erected and formerly owned by the Dillsburg Vitrified Brick and Tile Company, is now being torn down. The bricks with which the five large kilns are constructed will be sold for building purposes and the machinery to the junk dealer.

This plant was erected five years ago at a cost of over $125,000, but could not be successfully operated. It has changed owners a number of times until last fall, when Mr. Hosfelt, of Shippensburg, purchased the entire property for $4,500. Under his direction it is being dismantled.

ARMS FOR REBELS REACH TAMPICO

No Opposition to Discharge of Cargo From Galveston.

PORT IS NOT BLOCKADED

The Sunshine Brings Cargo of Ammunition to the Rebel Forces—May End Mediation.

Vera Cruz, Mex., June 6.—Arms and ammunition for the Constitutionalists were disembarked at Tampico from the American ship Sunshine, commanded by Captain Brown, who carried out the operation without opposition.

The papers of the Sunshine, which came from Galveston, were not deposited at the consulate, the captain declaring that he knew of no reason why they should be.

Tampico an Open Port.

Washington, June 6.—Grave possibilities even to the breaking off of all mediation proceedings, were foreseen by officials in the question of maintaining Tampico as an open port.

The complications caused by the shipment of arms to the Constitutionalists and the fact that Carranza still is an unknown quantity in the mediation equation, have put the Mexican situation in a worse muddle than ever before, according to diplomats.

A belief that the government is not sincere in its endeavor to settle the Mexican question by mediation has gained some ground in the last two days. It is asserted in some quarters that the administration must prevent the landing of arms shipped from American ports to the Constitutionalists to retain the confidence of the mediators. But, according to an authority on international law, the fact that the cargoes have been cleared from this country restrains the government from interfering with the landing of the arms.

This is understood to be the reason for Secretary of State Bryan's reported statement that it was a "bad mistake" to permit the cargoes to leave the United States.

Secretary Bryan reiterated that Tampico still is held as an open port, notwithstanding that several ships are on the way there with arms for the Constitutionalists.

"Will it continue to be an open port when ammunition reaches there?" he was asked.

"I can only talk of the present, leaving the future to those who would speculate," returned the secretary.

Officials of the state and navy departments were busy with plans for meeting whatever emergencies might arise at Tampico. The Huerta gunboats Bravo and Zaragoza, at Puerto Mexico, and the Progresso, at Alvarado, have not yet moved. They are closely watched by United States warships, and will be followed by them wherever they go.

The situation was further complicated by the intimation that the agreement with Great Britain and Holland that Tampico would be maintained as an open port, might force the United States to take action, even if this led to hostilities.

BADGER HAS ORDERS TO ACT

Unconfirmed Rumor He Has Been Told to Capture Huerta Gunboats.

Washington, June 6.—Naval officials refused to discuss a report that orders have been sent to Admiral Badger to instruct Admiral Mayo, at Tampico, to capture the two Mexican gunboats, should an attempt be made to close that port.

The report declares that such an order has been issued, in an effort to prevent a blockade of the Panuco river.

From a high authority on the general staff of the army it was ascertained that the navy department, upon authority of the state department, has instructed Admiral Badger to seize the custom house at Tampico, if necessary, to prevent the landing of the cargo by the Antilla, carrying arms to the rebels.

Navy department officials reiterated statements that Tampico is an open port, but at the same time it was pointed out that this government would not permit any interference with commerce at Tampico by the Mexican gunboats.

Carranza Delays Reply.

El Paso, Tex., June 6.—General Venustiano Carranza, "first chief" of the Mexican Constitutionalists, is holding back his reply to the note of the "A. B. C." mediators regarding his resignation in the Niagara Falls peace parleys.

He is sparing for time to see the trend of events of the next few days, and also, it is said, believes his position will be improved if he delays his reply till he has formally declared himself provisional president and set up his provisional government.

In preparation for this step, Carranza has selected seven of his cabinet ministers.

MINERS OPPOSE "OPEN TEST" PLAN

Will Fight Decision Allowing All to Seek Foremanships.

Pottsville, Pa., June 6.—At a meeting of the members of three district boards of the United Mine Workers here the plans of the miners of this district to attack in court the decision of the state mining department which permits all mine employees to take the examination for mine foremen's certificates was unanimously indorsed.

The miners will be represented by ex-Congressman James B. Reilly and James J. Moran. The proceedings will be begun immediately, but no injunction will be applied for until after a conference with Attorney General Bell.

If the latter agrees that no certificates shall be issued to candidates for foremen who are not miners until the courts have passed on the question of law involved an injunction will not be necessary. Otherwise it will be asked for.

The decision of Attorney General Bell allowing inside mine carpenters, laborers or other employees to stand examinations for mine foremen's certificates provided they have worked inside the mines five years, is the cause of the trouble. Heretofore, none but practical miners were considered eligible, and the miners contend this is still the law.

AUTO BANDITS GET $5800

Attack Employees of Two Firms and Steal Payrolls.

New York, June 6.—Two daring daylight hold-ups by armed automobile bandits yielding a total of $5800 in cash, one in Brooklyn and the other one hour later in Manhattan.

In the Brooklyn robbery the highwaymen obtained $3000 from messengers employed by John W. Masury & Son, paint dealers. The robbers avowed the messengers with a display of revolvers, and seizing the bag containing the payroll, escaped without a fight.

They used blackjacks to beat the assistant cashier of the American Can company and a porter of that company into insensibility on the steps of the company's factory in West Fourteenth street and escaped with a payroll of $2800.

Year For Mona Lisa Thief.

Florence, Italy, June 6.—The plea of "extenuating circumstances" was accepted in behalf of Vincenzo Perugia, who stole Da Vinci's "Mona Lisa" from the Louvre in Paris. The judges sentenced him to one year and fifteen days' imprisonment. As Perugia has been in prison awaiting trial since last December, he will serve only about six months.

Accused of Killing Father.

TITLED "SUFF" STARTLED COURT

Daughter of Lady Blomfield Exhorted British King.

OFFICIAL ARE UNNERVED

Palace Attendants Have Taken Precautions to Prevent Further Disorder at Royal Receptions.

London, June 6.—Miss Mary Blomfield, daughter of Lady Sara Blomfield, widow of Sir Arthur Blomfield, the famous architect, was the suffragette who created the sensational scene at Buckingham Palace when she threw herself on her knees before King George and Queen Mary.

Miss Blomfield alone was concerned in the incident, although her sister who also attended the court, was requested to leave the palace after the occurrence, despite the fact that she took no part in the demonstration. She left without protest.

Officials of the palace were on the verge of nervous prostration as the result of the scene, and the lord chamberlain's department has taken every precaution to circumvent any attempt to repeat the performance when an other function takes place at Buckingham Palace.

Persons in the immediate vicinity at the time say that the whole scene lasted less than ten seconds and that the woman had only time to ejaculate audibly, "Your majesties! For God's sake—" when she was seized and hustled out of the throne room, finishing the sentence by saying "don't use force," as she went.

King George was the coolest man in the company and the presentation proceeded after the incident with clockwork regularity.

It is understood that no further action will be taken against Miss Blomfield except to bar her from future court functions.

The sisters obtained admission to court in the ordinary way, through application to the lord chamberlain's department.

John E. Redmond, leader of the Irish Nationalists, declined a request by Irish suffragettes that he receive a deputation to discuss the inclusion of women as electors for the Irish parliament. Mr. Redmond pointed out that previous deputations of this nature had caused only unpleasantness and reiterated the view that Ireland, under home rule, must decide whether she wants woman voters.

In consequence of suffragette attacks, churches in many parts of the country are being closed except for the usual Sunday services. Following is a sample of the notices posted by the rectors:

"Owing to dastardly outrages by frenzied criminals, who have no regard for God or man, this church will be closed except during the hours of divine service."

The Earl of Lytton replies to a church newspaper which appealed to the suffragettes for a "truce of God," as follows:

"There is only one way in which this deplorable movement can be ended, and that is by the introduction by the government of a woman's suffrage bill. On all matters connected with their policy the women are also lately deaf to suggestions or advice."

Militants Burn Historic Church. Derby, Eng., June 6.—The Broadchal church, one of the historic religious structures of England, was destroyed by a fire set by a suffragette arson squad. Only the spire of the building which was built in the Norman period was left standing.

The monument erected to Erasmus Darwin, an ancestor of the famous naturalist, was wrecked by the flames, and the priceless "chained Bible" was burned.

T. R. NOW IN FRANCE

Roosevelt Accepted Honors and Privileges Only Given to Rulers.

Paris, June 6.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt arrived in France on the way to Madrid, where he will attend the wedding of his son, Kermit, to Miss Belle Willard next week.

Colonel Roosevelt is accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, and his cousin, Philip J. Roosevelt.

The French government extended honors and privileges to the colonel, such as are only accorded to former rulers. A special train brought the Roosevelt party from Cherbourg to Paris, and a "white pass," giving the bearer unlimited privileges, was sent to Cherbourg for presentation to the former president.

HOUSE APPROVES ANTI-TRUST BILL

Commerce Board Given Power Over Railroad Securities.

Washington, June 6.—By a vote of 275 to 54, the house passed the Clayton anti-trust bill. Representative White, of Ohio, was the only Democrat voting in opposition to the bill.

Without the formality of a roll call vote, the house had before this finally passed the administration bill to create an interstate trade commission.

This commission is designed to absorb the present bureau of corporations and is given broad investigating powers to aid the president and the department of justice in investigating and regulating trusts.

As soon as this bill passed a roll call vote was ordered on the Clayton anti-trust bill, which embraces interlocking directorates, holding company's price discriminations and pro-labor legislation. This bill was passed by a vote of 325 to 12. By this measure the interstate commerce commission is given power of prior approval over all railroad security issues.

Encouraging Theory.

The encouraging theory recently advanced that the mineral elements of the soil are inexhaustible seems to be borne out by the fact that Chinese soils are among the richest in the world after 4,000 years of intensive cultivation.

AUNT SARAH'S MONEY

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1914, by Associated Literary Press.

No one ever spoke of her as the Widow Tyler, although she had been that for years and years. She was always referred to as Aunt Sarah. She was called queer and odd and a little off in her head, and nothing particular happened to her till a brother died and left her $1,000 in cash. Even before the money came into her hands everybody was wondering what Aunt Sarah would do with it. The lawyer who arranged matters started in to tell her of a good investment in real estate, but she cut him short with:

"You tend to your business and I will to mine."

Several weeks after receiving her money the woman walked into the local bank one day and said she'd like to look around. There wasn't much to see outside of the brick vault with its iron door. According to the president, the best ten burglars in the country couldn't get into that vault if left alone all day.

"It looks risky," she replied, "and I don't want to run no chances with my thousand dollars."

The matter was gone over again and again, and, though still unconvinced, she finally decided to deposit her money. Every morning she used to walk down to the bank to inquire if anything had happened during the night, and after this had become monotonous the president finally said:

"Look here, Aunt Sarah, you know I've got money outside of this bank and that I'm a man of my word. I don't like to have you worrying about your money, and I promise to give you five times the amount if the place is robbed."

"I've allus heard of you as an honest man," replied Aunt Sarah, "but if you put that in writin' I shan't worry so much."

It was put in writing and duly witnessed, and for a few weeks the woman felt easier in her mind. One day a stranger came to town with a patent churn. Aunt Sarah happened to be in the house of a neighbor when he called, and half an hour later she went down to the bank to say to the president:

"You just keep your eyes open. I never seen a bank burglar in all my life, but if that fellow with the churn ain't one then I don't know black from white."

She had been told that bank burglars generally began operations about midnight. At midnight that night she left her house and took a walk down to the bank. She fully expected to find the doors standing wide open and a wag on backed up to the curb and was rather disappointed when she made no discovery. After a look around she returned home, but on her way she said to herself:

"I shan't give it up this way. I know that churn man is a bank burglar, and if he ain't burglarizin' tonight it's because he ain't ready. I'll come again tomorrow night."

That was what she did, and although disappointed again she was there on the third night at the same hour. This time she met with better luck. The rear of the bank was on an alley, and as Aunt Sarah quietly appeared she discovered a man crouched under one of the windows. The iron bars which had protected it had been filed and wrenched off, and a barrel had been rolled up to give somebody a lift into the opening.

All of a sudden, without planning it at all, the woman sprang forward with a scream, or a succession of them. The man in the alley uttered a shout of alarm and fled at the top of his speed, and as he went clattering away a man who had been working inside the bank appeared at the window and jumped for the barrel beneath. He landed on it, but it went over and gave him a fling, and when he came down on the cobblestones of the alley his hip was broken and he lay helpless. Aunt Sarah's screams brought a sleepy watchman, and he soon had half the town out of their beds.

When the bank president reached the scene after a run of five blocks the first person to salute him was Aunt Sarah, and she called out:

"Didn't I tell you so! I knowed this bank would be robbed some day. I've got your written agreement, and now you'll hand me out them $5,000!"

The bank president tried to crawl out of his agreement by claiming that the bank hadn't actually been robbed, but Aunt Sarah had a lawyer, brought him to time, and he paid her $5,000. A public purse of $1,000 was made up for her, and when she had the snug little fortune in her possession she determined to be her own banker in future. With a watchdog, a bear trap, a shotgun and a kettle of hot water always on the stove, Aunt Sarah managed to keep tramps and robbers on the outside for the next five years, and then one day she found death in bed. She had died a natural death, and there was lively curiosity about her money. The coroner and a couple of constables hunted high and low for a week without finding a dollar. Then others were brought into the search, and when all were in despair the money was found. There was a pan of flour sitting on a shelf in the pantry, and it was knocked down quite by accident and the $7,000 found underneath the flour. Had a robber searched the house for a month he would never have thought of looking there.

Remarkable Pedal Stop.

The lowest pedal stop in existence has just been installed in a Lowell (Mass.) church. It is 128 feet long, and gives a note technically known as CCCCCC, vibrating only four times a second. The sound is so soft that it can hardly be heard, and yet so strong that it prevails against the heaviest chords.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

CAULIFLOWER COOKERY.

At this time of the year cauliflower may be bought everywhere, and suggestions for cooking it are in order. Cauliflower chopped fine with a knife and beaten with the egg for an omelet makes a very good hot day dish, and any of the vegetable left over may be used for this purpose.

Dipped in Egg.

Fried Cauliflower.—Boiled cauliflower may be dipped in egg simply and then fried, or it may be dipped in a thin frying batter, or yet again in a real fritter batter.

Cauliflower in Milk.—Cleanse and blanch a compact cauliflower by boiling it in salted water for about five minutes and then boil it in milk (head downward). Remove as soon as it is tender and drain it thoroughly. Melt a tablespoonful of butter in a saucepan and stir into it a little flour; then moisten it with some of the milk in which the cauliflower was cooked. Stir the sauce until it is smooth and thick, season it with salt and pepper and add a little grated Parmesan cheese and a few drops of lemon juice and strain it over the cauliflower.

Cauliflower in Sauce.

Cauliflower and Tomato Sauce.—Boil a fresh cauliflower; then drain it carefully, sprinkle with white pepper and place on a hot dish. Pour over it a cupful of tomato sauce, sprinkle with breadcrumbs browned in butter and add a squeeze of lemon juice and a dash of pepper and a quarter of a cupful of grated cheese. Place in the oven until very hot.

Cauliflower in White Sauce.—Line a well buttered deep baking dish with a potato puree, the vessel being first dusted with browned breadcrumbs; then fill up with the following mixture: Make a good white sauce and put into it the flower of a well boiled cauliflower broken into pieces. Season to taste; then place a layer of sliced tomatoes, adding a little pepper and salt; then another layer of cauliflower and some hard boiled egg chopped and repeat until the tin is full. Cover with a top of potato puree and bake in a moderate oven for one hour. Turn out and serve with or without gravy.

Spread of Gipsy Moth by Wind.

Experiments conducted by the United States Bureau of Entomology prove that the newly-hatched caterpillars of the gipsy moth may be blown, under favorable conditions, a distance of six miles or more. Thus the wind is an important factor in the spread of this destructive pest.

Three Kinds of People.

There are three kinds of people in the world—the wills, the won'ts and the can'ts. The first accomplish everything, the second oppose everything, and the third fail in everything.—William T. Ellis.

Complimenting the Apostles.

A vicar in an English country parish was once puzzled when at a baptism the sponsor gave the name "Acts." "Acts?" asked the vicar. "What do you mean?" He thereupon asked the clerk to spell it. He did—A C T S. So Acts was the babe, and will continue to be in this life. Afterward, in the vestry, the vicar asked the good woman what made her choose such a name. "Why, sir," she replied, "we be religious people. We've got our of an already, and they be call'd Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, and so my husband thought we'd compliment the apostles a bit."—From "Anecdotes of Pulpit and Parish."

Irish Humor.

Hugh O'Donnell is a story teller and a humorist. The principal charm of an "O'Donnell" in fact, consists of the running fires of stories.

He told, the other night, of the Irishman who stood before the grave of Parnell, on which was inscribed the epitaph "I still live." "Och, begorry," exclaimed Pat, "if I were dead I'd own up to it."

Even the little children in Ireland, according to O'Donnell, have the true Irish sense of humor. He was standing before Nelson's statue, he said, when he asked a youngster, "Was Nelson really Irish?"

"That he was," replied the child. "That's why he is what he was."—Pittsburgh Chronicle.

She Knew Not the Hoosiers.

Miss Tompkins believed in speaking correctly. The boundaries of Boston did not contain all who were jealous of the purity of the mother tongue. Not from her should the makers of dialect stories obtain their material.

When she heard some friends discuss Edward Eggleston's best known novel she resolved to obtain a copy. She was quite sure she knew the title, although of course she would not stir her words the way some careless people did.

So she asked the salesman at the book store:

"Have you a book by Edward Eggleston, entitled 'Who Is Your Schoolmaster?'"—Guthrie's Companion.

Value of Onions as Diet.

Persons troubled with distressing eruptions of the skin may give their skin a new lease of life by having onions frequently figuring in the diet. Furthermore, disease germs cannot live in the presence of onions, nor can disease germs have ill effects on persons whose blood is charged with onion juice.

Training Outweighs Long Service

There is no better proof of this than the every-day scenes of long service, untrained employees at the beck and call of younger men who occupy the big positions because of their training. It's a case of Training vs. Long Service—with the odds in favor of the trained man.

The VALIANT of VIRGINIA

(MRS. POST WHEELER)
ILLUSTRATED BY LAUREN STOUT

Copyright 1912 by Bobbs-Merrill Co.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—John Vallant, a rich society favorite, suddenly discovers that the Valiant corporation, which his father founded and which was the principal source of his wealth, has failed.

CHAPTER II—He voluntarily turns over his private fortune to the receiver for the corporation.

CHAPTER III—His entire remaining possessions consist of an old motor car, a white bull dog and Damory court, a neglected estate in Virginia.

CHAPTER IV—He learns that this estate came into the family by royal grant and has been in the possession of the Vallants ever since.

CHAPTER V—On the way to Damory court he meets Shirley Dandridge, a beautiful girl, and decides that he is going to like Virginia immensely.

CHAPTER VI—An old negro tells Shirley's fortune and predicts great trouble for her on account of a man.

CHAPTER VII—Uncle Jefferson, an old negro, takes Vallant to Damory court.

CHAPTER VIII—Shirley's mother, Mrs. Dandridge, and Major Bristow exchange reminiscences during which it is revealed that the major, Vallant's father, and a man named Sassoon, were rivals for the hand of Mrs. Dandridge in her youth. Sassoon and Vallant fought a duel on her account in which the former was killed.

CHAPTER IX—Vallant finds Damory court overgrown with weeds and creepers and the buildings in a very much neglected condition. Uncle Jefferson and his wife, Aunt Daphne, are engaged as servants.

CHAPTER X—Vallant explores his ancestral home. He is surprised by a hunting party which invades his estate. He recognizes Shirley at the head of the party.

CHAPTER XI—He gives sanctuary to the cornered fox. Gossips discuss the advent of the new owner and recall the tragedy in which the elder Vallant took part.

CHAPTER XII—Vallant decides to rehabilitate Damory court and make the land produce a living for him.

CHAPTER XIII—He meets Shirley, who has been gathering flowers on the Vallant estate, and reveals his identity to her.

CHAPTER XIV—Vallant saves Shirley from the bite of a snake, which bites him. Knowing the deadliness of the bite, Shirley sucks the poison from the wound and saves his life.

CHAPTER XV—Shirley tells her mother of the incident. Her mother is strangely moved at hearing that a Vallant is again living at Damory court.

CHAPTER XVI—Vallant learns some of the history of the family from the old butler and Major Bristow.

CHAPTER XVII—He learns for the first time that his father left Virginia on account of a duel in which Doctor South and Major Bristow were slain as his father's second.

CHAPTER XVIII—Vallant and Shirley become good friends. Mrs. Dandridge faints when she first meets Vallant.

CHAPTER XIX—Vallant works wonders in the old place. He discovers that he has a fortune in old walnut trees.

CHAPTER XX—With the advice and assistance of the major and Shirley, Vallant restores the gardens to what they were in his father's time.

CHAPTER XXI—The yearly tournament, a survival of the jousting of feudal times, is to be held at Damory court.

CHAPTER XXII—At the last moment Vallant takes the place of the knight, who has been killed.

CHAPTER XXIII—He wins and chooses Shirley Dandridge as queen of beauty to the dismay of Katharine Fargo, a former sweetheart, who is visiting in Virginia.

CHAPTER XXIV—The tournament ball at Damory court draws the elite of the countryside. Shirley is crowned by Vallant as queen of beauty.

CHAPTER XXV—Vallant tells Shirley of his love and they become engaged.

CHAPTER XXVI—Katharine Fargo is deeply humiliated at reading in the faces of Vallant and Shirley the evidence of plighted troth.

CHAPTER XXVII—Katharine Fargo, determined not to give up Vallant without a struggle, points out to Shirley how terrible it would be for the woman who caused the duel to meet Vallant, who looks so much like his father.

CHAPTER XXVIII—Shirley, uncertain, but feeling that her mother was in love with the victim of Vallant's pistol, breaks the engagement.

CHAPTER XXIX—Greef King, a liberated convict whom Major Bristow had sent to prison, makes threats against his prosecutor.

CHAPTER XXX—Vallant pleads with Shirley, but fails to persuade her to change her decision.

CHAPTER XXXI—Major Bristow is fatally wounded by Greef King, but before dying, he confesses to Mrs. Bristow that he had kept a letter Vallant had written to her after the duel.

CHAPTER XXXII—Mrs. Bristow learns from the thirty-year-old letter that Vallant expected her to answer the note if she wanted him to return. For it was Vallant she loved.

CHAPTER XXXV.

The Song of the Nightingale.

Along the dark turnpike John Vallant rode with his chin sunk on his breast. He was wretchedly glad of the darkness, for it covered a thousand familiar sights he had grown to love. Yet through the dark came drifting sounds that caught at him with clutching hands—the bay of a hound from some far-off kennel, the whirling note of frogs, the impatient high whinny of a horse across pasture-bars—and his nostrils widened to the wild braided fragrance of the fields over which the mist was spinning its fairy carded wool.

The preparations for his going had been quickly made. He was leaving behind him all but a single portmanteau. Uncle Jefferson had already taken this—with Chum—to the station. The old man had now gone sorrowfully aloft to the blockhouse, a half-mile up the track, to bespeak the stopping of the express. He would go back on the horse his master was riding.

The lonely little depot flanked a siding beside a dismal stretch of yellow clay-bank gouged by rains. Its windows were dark and the weather-beaten plank platform was illuminated by a single lantern that hung on a nail beside the locked door, its sickly flame showing blue-licks through smoky streakings of lamp-black. At one side, in the shadow, was his bag, and beside it the tethered bulldog.

sole spot of white against the moon-cremy forlornness—lying with one splinted leg, like a swaddled ramrod, sticking straight out before him.

In the saddle, Vallant struck his hand hard against his knee. Surely it was a dream! It could not be that he was leaving Virginia, leaving Damory court, leaving her! But he knew that it was not a dream.

Far away, rounding Powhattan Mountain, he heard the low-drawn hoot of the coming train flinging its sky-warning in a host of scampering echoes. Among them mixed another sound of a horse, galloping fast and hard.

His own fidgeted, flung up wide nostrils and neighed shrilly. Who was coming along that rumbled highway at such an hour in such breakneck fashion?

The train was nearer now; he could hear its low rumbling hum, rising to a roar, and the click and spring of the rails. But though he lifted a foot from the stirrup, he did not dismount. Something in the whirlwind speed of coming caught and held him motionless. He had a sudden curious feeling that all the world beside did not exist; there were only the sweeping rush of the nearing train—impersonal, unhuman—he, sitting his horse in the gloom, and that unknown rider whose anguish of speed outstripped the steam, riding—to whom?

The road skirted the track as it neared the station, and all at once a white glare from the opened fire-box came.

tery or all is that you should love me. I doubt no miracle hereafter, Dearest, dearest!"

At the entrance of the cherry lane, he fastened his horse to the hedge, and noiselessly let down the pasture-bars for her golden chestnut. When he came back to where she stood waiting on the edge of the lawn, the late moon, golden-vestured, was just showing above the rim of the hills, painting the deep soft blueness of the Virginian night with a translucence as pure as prayer. Above the fallen hood of her cloak her hair shone like a nimbus, and the loveliness of her face made him catch his breath for the wonderfulness of it.

As they stood heaved in each other's arms, heart beating against heart, and the whole world throbbing to joy, the nightgale beyond the arbors began to bubble and thrill its unimaginable melody. It came to them like the voice of the magical rose-scented night itself, set to the wordless music of the silver leaves it rose and swelled exultant to break and die in a cascade of golden notes. But in their hearts was the song that is fadeless, immortal.

THE END.

Awful Come Down.

William Draycott, playing in "Under Cover," is a Scotchman. One time, while under the Williamson management, he played the title role in "The Duke of Killiecrankie" in New Zealand. In one scene he wore kilts such as the Clan Gordon uses. A Scotchman in the audience sought him out after the first performance and expressed great pleasure at seeing a Scotch actor in kilts.

"Oh, it's fine," said the newcomer. "You're a plesin' sight to the eyes." He hung around Draycott every night. Finally, one evening, the actor told him the bill was to be changed. "And what are you going to play now?" asked the other.

"I'm to appear in a playlet called 'Madame Butterfly,'" said Draycott. "And what part will you take?"

"I'll be a lieutenant in the United States navy."

"Huh!" came from the Scot. "Ain't it an awful come down fr you?"

Mrs. Twaddles Wonders.

"I have always wondered," philosophized Mrs. Twaddles, "how a horse feels. Now don't interrupt with some silly remark; I am in earnest. A horse hasn't any idea what is going to happen to him when he is hitched up. He doesn't know how far he is going, or what he is going for. To be driven hither and thither, blindly, seemingly without purpose, with no idea what it's all about or when it will be over—how must the poor creature feel—what must he think about it all?"

"I suppose," answered Mr. Twaddles, wearily, "that he must feel just as I do when you take me on a shopping trip with you."

But Mrs. Twaddles merely sniffed.

His Face Called for a Touring Car.

That it is expected of some very plain women to have money in their own right, and some very unattractive men to possess motor cars in order to maintain their popularity, was shown the other day in a conversation between two young women on a street car. They were speaking of a man they had just met, who supposedly had accumulated quite a bit of wealth.

Said the first one, eagerly: "Has he a motor car?"

Replied the second: "No, I think not."

And the first one looked up in an evident manner of surprise.

"What!" she exclaimed, "that face and no motor car?"

Painless Death.

On one occasion a well-known public man described the act of dying as "a great adventure that must be much more interesting than setting out for the north pole." While few will agree with him, it is a great thing to know that science has robbed death of its terrors, and has taught us that no matter how much a dying person may appear to be suffering, he or she, immediately before death, can feel no pain whatever.

His Worry.

"Clarence," said the American heiress hesitatingly, "I think that you should be told at once how my father made his money. Our business men in this country have methods which to one of your pure soul, whose motto is 'Noblesse oblige,' cannot but—" "Cease, Mamie, cease," said the young lord reassuringly, "tell me no more. However he made his millions I can forgive, for your sake. But—er—has he still got them all right?"

Eccentric Inn Names.

We are losing most of our eccentric inn names, but in Germany they are adding to them. Berlin now boasts the "Comfortable Chicken," "Cold Frog," "Stiff Dog," "Thirsty Pelican," "Dirty Parlor," "Musical Cats," "Boxers' Den," and "Lame Louise." Leipzig has "The Old Straw Bag," "Stadtohen an 'Open Bungle,' and the vicinity of many a cemetery in the Fatherland is graced by a "Last Tear"—London Chronicle.

Potash in Pompeii.

Dr. Kleiber, Swiss scientist, has discovered that the thick layer of ashes covering the ruins of Herculaneum and Pompeii contains large quantities of potash and argil, a valuable agricultural fertilizer. He believes the region around Vesuvius is rich in potash. It is proposed that the Italian government shall exploit the volcanic deposits commercially.

Regular Hercules.

Whenever there is a street spat nearly every woman has the idea that her husband would be a very fine fender for carnage if she didn't hold him back. —Louisville Courier-Journal.

A Double Headed Bull.

On the occasion of a public reception at Napier, Australia, the school children of the town, after being duly complimented by his excellency from County Tyrone on the hearty manner in which they had rendered the national anthem, were solemnly assured that if they put their shoulders to the wheel they would be sure to reach the top of the tree, upon which a compatriot turned to a companion and said, "Sure, it was an axle-tree he meant, bedad!"

Equal to the Occasion.

Michelot, the famous comedian, suffered a great deal from the spite of his colleagues and found it necessary to be on the alert at every performance. On a certain occasion he had to scold a servant in one of Moliere's plays, when the "claque," which had been bribed by his rivals, began to hiss.

Michelot was by no means disconcerted. Giving the servant a couple of blows on the ear, not included in the part, he extemporized as follows:

"You vile scamp of a varlet, there is nothing you think of: There you stand quietly listening to the vermin squealing in the house and never trouble yourself to get the rat poison!"

The effect of this rally was striking. The audience broke out in loud applause, and no subsequent attempt was made to hiss the actor.

In the Darkest Hour.

When weary life, breathing reluctant breath, hath no hope sweeter than the hope of death; then the best counsel and the best relief to cheer the spirit or to cheat the grief, the only calm, the only comfort heard, comes in the music of a woman's word.—Edwin Arnold.

Youth's Cruelty.

Youth is a graceful thing of high-sounding words and impetuous thoughts, but, like many other graceful things, it can be very hard and very cruel.—The Witness for the Defense, by A. E. W. Mason.

EXPENSIVE CROSSING.

The Czar Had His Little Joke, Though He Had to Pay For It.

Czar Nicholas I of Russia was an incorrigible joker. On one of his journeys, says Novellen-Schatz, he came to an out of the way post station and learned that because of the bad roads it would take several hours to travel by coach to the next station. They told him, however, that a footpath led through the forest, and that if he cared to walk he could reach his destination sooner than by coach.

The czar and his adjutant decided to walk and set out through the forest. Presently they came to a river. The bridge had broken down, and they were considering how they should get over when a peasant came along. The czar asked him if there was no other way of getting over.

"No, sire," replied the peasant. "How are you going to cross?" "Oh, I just walk across on foot."

"How about your pack? Can you carry that?" "Surely, on my shoulders."

"My man, you shall have ten rubles if you will carry me to the other bank."

"NOW TAKE ME OVER."

The peasant agreed, took the czar on his back, and carried him over.

"Now bring my companion over for ten more rubles," said Nicholas.

The peasant recrossed the stream, picked up the adjutant, and was in the middle of the river when the czar called out, "I'll give you twenty rubles if you throw him off!" The peasant found himself in an embarrassing position.

"You shall have fifty rubles if you bring me to the other shore," said the adjutant nervously.

"Sixty," called out the czar from the other bank, "if you pitch him in!"

The peasant let go of the adjutant, but the frightened officer threw his arms round his neck and cried out, "A hundred rubles! Now take me over!" The peasant accepted the last offer and carried him to where the czar stood.

After breakfast the adjutant wrote in his account book: "For breakfast, 10 rubles; for transporting his majesty over the river, 10 rubles; for transporting the adjutant over the river, under highly amusing circumstances, 100 rubles."
